HANS HOLBEIN

Have you heard of Hans Holbein? He was a painter with a fantastic skill for art.

Holbein was a German painter who died in 1543. In 1526, he travelled to England for work. He quickly built a reputation, and worked for famous names such as Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn. While working for Henry VIII, he made many paintings and also created various, grand designs for jewellery and plates.

In 1539, King Henry VIII was looking for a woman to marry for the fourth time. Through this marriage, Henry wanted to secure an alliance with William, Duke of Cleves in Germany. The Duke allowed Henry to pick which of his two sisters he wanted to marry.

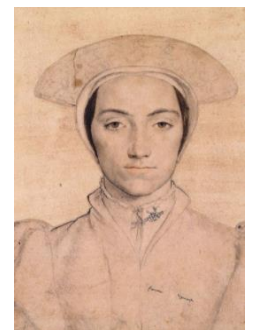

Henry sent his painter, Hans Holbein, to visit and paint these two women. These women were called Anne and Amalia of Cleves. After seeing the paintings, Henry chose to marry Anne of Cleves.

However, when King Henry VIII and Anne of Cleves met, Henry was unhappy with her and eventually they divorced.

SPOTLIGHT ON SCIENCE

Leonardo da Vinci was a scientist and also an artist! He is most famous for his painting of Mona Lisa, but he also used science to enhance his other paintings. He often studied rock formations, fossils and caves in his drawings. Later in his career, he also looked at human anatomy and looked closely in how the eye works and examined all of its connections and details.
